The first quarter of the 2018-19 school year is coming to a close, and we are excited about the wonderful work taking place in the school district. Students have started the new school year off strong and enjoying fantastic opportunities. Our focus in the school district throughout the month of October will be enhancing student resiliency skills inside and outside of the classroom. The 21st century working world requires resiliency in order to achieve success.

Preparing Life-Ready Graduates

The educational needs of our children in Breckinridge County are continuing to evolve as the world changes. The 21st century global economy requires workers to take initiative and exhibit resiliency. Throughout the months of August and September, we as a school district focused on developing student initiative takers. This month we will begin working to enhance resiliency skills in our students in an effort to fully prepare them for their futures. As a district, we are dedicated to providing students a safe, positive, and engaging learning environment. Offering work-based learning programs like COOP opportunities at BCHS and the BCATC are critically important to the future success of our students. We must continue to build business and industry partners in an effort to meet the growing needs of students. In addition, our students wishing to pursue higher education must continue to be provided opportunities to visit college campuses around the state. Focusing our work in the school district around developing student initiative taking skills and enhancing resiliency will better enable students to become life-ready graduates.
