Widow appeals to council, fears for public safety

BY DANIEL KENNEDY

TRINITY — Fewer than 30 days after the loss of her husband, the wife of deceased Trinity City Councilman Gene Byerly addressed members of council following an emotional tribute to her late spouse.

Mary Byerly spoke about the need to remember the security from the city staff and council in the past. Harkening back to conversations she had with the Retention District Board during her husband’s tenure as county sheriff, she requested council revisited discussion regarding additional hires and law enforcement support at its annual retreat today.

Fearing an inability for one deputy to meet the city's needs, she suggested council might turn its former city hall, which it recently moved out of, into a satellite office for traffic enforcement. She asked that Grace’s (agen- da) packages, we would study them,” Byerly said. “This is money’s somewhere that we may can get a satellite office that other residents have endured. Two weeks end after Gene Byerly died, Mary Byerly said she received a death threat from someone who claimed to know she lived alone. “Byerly said she called to help and the Randolph County Sheriff’s Office sent someone to her home, but she was unsatisfied with the police protection, because we just don’t,” Byerly said.

According to Byerly, her fears were heightened when she said she experienced first-hand what other residents have endured.
