ASHEBORO — Four Randolph County School System schools will have new principals for the upcoming school year as a result of administrative appointments and transfers approved this week.

The Randolph County Board of Education approved the changes Monday night following a closed session on personnel. Three middle schools — Archdale-Trinity, Braxton Craven and Uwharrie — and Trindale Elementary will have new principals, effective July 1, for the 2015-16 school year.

Todd Beane, Uwharrie’s principal, will become principal of Archdale-Trinity Middle which serves grades 7-8. Jeff Moss, now Seagrove Elementary’s principal, is headed to Uwharrie Middle.

Brian Hodgin, now assistant principal at Wheatmore High, will be principal at Braxton Craven, county schools’ sixth-grade school. Todd Henderson, who now splits his time between Trindale and Trinity elementary schools, will become Trindale’s principal.

Additionally, Leigh Jones was appointed Randolph’s director of middle schools/AIG (Academically or Intellectually Gifted)/Title II (Teacher Quality) at a starting date to be determined. She replaces Amy Walker who will become assistant superintendent for human resources after Cathy Brady’s retirement next month.

Jones has been chief academic officer for secondary schools for the Rockingham County School System since 2014 and was principal of Rockingham’s Dalton L. McMichael High School from 2011-14. She previously was principal of Asheboro City Schools’ North Asheboro Middle School from 2009-11 and has also worked for Alamance-Burlington, Winston-Salem/Forsyth and Ashe school systems. She also was an assistant women’s basketball coach for four years at Appalachian State University where she received her bachelor’s degree. She has her master’s in school administration, as a member of the Principal Fellows Program, from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Todd Beane, who’s transferring to Archdale-Trinity Middle, has been Uwharrie’s principal since 2013 and previously worked for Montgomery County Schools as a teacher, assistant principal and principal from 2001-13. He also taught at Moore County Schools’ Westmoore Elementary from 1998-2001 and in Sampson County for his first year of teaching. He replaces Andrea Haynes who will become director for human resources when Judi Craven retires in June.

Jeff Moss, who will fill Beane’s position at Uwharrie, has been Seagrove’s principal since 2013. He previously was assistant principal for Asheboro City Schools’ South Asheboro Middle from 2011-13 and has worked for Winston-Salem/Forsyth, Guilford and Chatham school systems.

Brian Hodgin, who’s headed to Braxton Craven, has been a Wheatmore assistant principal since 2012, and taught at Hopewell Elementary from 2007-12. He also taught at Asheboro City Schools’ Asheboro High from 1999-2007 and McCrary and Lindley Park elementaries from 1996-99.

Todd Henderson has been assistant principal at both Trindale and Trinity since 2014 and will become Trindale’s principal. Prior to that he worked as Randolph’s coordinator of student services and director for the Connect Initiative Grant from 2007-2014 and served as the at-risk coordinator and taught at Archdale-Trinity Middle.
