WHS senior aspires to own his own car manufacturing company

By Terrence Jefferies
tjefferies@courier-tribune.com

HEART OF GOLD — Elijah Pinkston, a senior at Wheatmore High School, works a part-time job, mentors students at John Lawrence Elementary, volunteers at his local church and assists his peers in need. “Me being a Christian, I know that is something God would want me to do is to help others succeed.”

“Always went to car shows with my Dad when I was little and always used to play with ‘Hot Wheels’ as a child,” said Pinkston, who plans to attend either N.C. A&T State University or the University of North Carolina-Charlotte to major in mechanical engineering.

“I would love to one day be able to say I am a proud African American who owns his own car company,” he said. His dream was born from his childhood.

“The murder is one of the overdose deaths: “The murder is one of the overdose deaths:” said Randolph County Sheriff Greg Seabolt said Friday.

He said that Gen -

‘Me being a Christian, I know that is something God would want me to do is to help others succeed.’

He attends car shows to this day, such as “Cars and Coffee,” a local organization in Greensboro that hosts car shows for car enthusiasts and any others interested in attending.

Copyright (c)2019 Gatehouse Media, Edition 03/30/2019
April 4, 2019 11:43 am (GMT +4:00)
From page 1A

Elijah is involved in a number of extra-curricular activities, including being a member of Wheatmore's SkillsUSA Club and the Audio/Visuals Club. He also mentors students at John Lawrence Elementary School in Archdale.

“T...