Rappahannock County High school was recognized as a one of the Top High Schools and Colleges in Virginia for 2014. The Virginia Living magazine, October 2014 issue recognized the school in the area of health and medicine. The Farm-to-Table program was recognized as a vital curriculum supporting other programs within the high school such as the general education courses, culinary arts, and our horticulture class. The Farm to Table program was a brainchild of the Farm Bureau organization and has long been supported in the community through Farm Bureau, local farmers, and our public school foundation, Headwaters. Mrs. Sarah Moore is the Farm to Table teacher and has made a huge impact on the program from 2013 until the present.

Dr. Matthews would like to recognize Sarah for her work ethic and passion by promoting Farm-to-Table at the elementary school and assisting with the high school horticulture classes.
