

FALSIFICATION OF REPORTING

Employees and students have a legal and ethical responsibility to provide information that is true, correct and complete to the best of their knowledge and belief. Falsifying reports or records, of any type, will not be tolerated, and the person(s) involved will be held accountable for their actions.

Any employee or student who knowingly falsifies information will be subject to disciplinary action and possible legal action. Based on the severity and type of falsification, disciplinary action may include a warning, written reprimand, suspension, expulsion or dismissal.

False accusations by a student against an employee or another student or by an employee against a student or another employee regarding alleged sexual misconduct or physical abuse that are intentionally made to discredit another and/or to jeopardize a person's employment, will warrant severe disciplinary action, including suspension, expulsion, and/or dismissal.
